

Wondering.....What If? Student Exemplars

What if the pillows are full of little lava pockets and trolls are fighting the lava to stay away from their home. Then suddenly one of them pops out of a hole and it drags me down. Then I have a sword, armour, and some never melting ice. I throw the ice in and immediately a huge cloud of smoke the strength of fifty men blew every one back and we won. The battle and the never melting ice was sitting there not a scratch on it. A few hours later we had a huge feast. Everyone blew up because the trolls don't know when to stop eating so the feast went on for hours and hours. Then I found the hole and escaped from the evil lava mountain.....John A.

What if a bird flying got my brush and started brushing it's feather. After that it came in my room and it started to go through my wardrobe. It found my dress that I used in my aunt's wedding. It made a whole, and I was so mad that I wanted to hit the bird so bad, but I knew he was innocent so I just said "shoo, shoo!" And she left. I never saw her again. 10 years later it came again but this time it was talking it had a squeaky voice and said "Remember me. Ah, ah, ah." And left. I had nightmares the whole week. Every 10 years she comes. Now when I see a bird flying I think it's her. I feel really scared and panic. I had to go to a therapest for the past 5 years. Until one day I woke up and found out it was a dream.....Selena

Wondering Like Pablo Neruda

Why do trains have two heads?

Do the two heads compete to make the loudest noise?

Is it the tracks that move?

Are they trying to split themselves in half? ..... Henry (8-30)

When the night comes do the sun's rays stay behind?
Do they wait for the moon to come?
Or do the rays leave with the sun and leave the moon with only it's brightness?
Should the moon have rays too?
Or should the moon come during day and the sun at night?
Or should there be both at the same time?
Should people sleep during the day and wake at night?....Lily (8-30)
